Welcome to Paw Print!

Happy Howl-o-ween! Whether you're taking your pets trick-or-treating or leaving them at home to hold down the fort, we want you to keep your furry little ghouls and goblins safe this Halloween! Please review the tips below to ensure you and your pet have a howlin' good time!

If you're dressing up your pets for the holiday, it is important to keep close watch on them while they are in their costume. Avoid putting your four-legged friends in an outfit that is too tight or that has small attachments that may pose choking hazards. If you plan to leave your pets at home, make sure they are kept in a safe place void of loud noises and strangers wearing costumes that might scare them.

Don't forget to keep hazardous decorations like candles and Jack-O-Lanterns out of a pet's reach to avoid a fire or a burn to your pet if one of these decorations is accidentally knocked over. Also, be sure to keep the candy wrappers and chocolate far away from your pets, as ingestion of these items can be very harmful to them! Be safe and have a happy holiday!

Meet Lilly, born on July 3, 2006. She loves to play with her sister Jasmine and to find ways to sneak into the food cabinets for little nibbles of human food (even though she knows this is not allowed). She once stole a piece of pizza right off of the table! Lilly loves toys and especially loves her Fat Cat Inc. Las Vegas Showgulls. The feathers and catnip drive her wild!
